

Published in Tradewinds on 28th May 2010

South Hook noise group formed

Residents in the Milford Haven region in South Wales have formed a protest group after what they describe as continued problems with noise emanating from vessels berthing at the South Hook LNG Terminal.

"We hope to encourage people to report noise nuisance which will enable Pembrokeshire County Council Port Health to gather statistics to encourage the shipping company to carry out necessary improvement works to bring these noise issues to an acceptable limit," South Hook Noise said.

The group stresses it is not campaigning against the terminal. "We realise your business is shipping," it said but after noise from vessels amounting to a statutory nuisance has been recorded on a number of occasions the group says it wants to engage with and encourage South Hook and Qatargas to make improvements.

Reproduced by kind permission of Tradewinds.